Sixon Cautions On Interference n Soviet Affairs

ANNAPOLIS, M. June 5 (AP).—President Nixon cautioned imericans today that detente could be threatened by U.S. inter-action in the internal affairs of the Soviet Union.

In an apparent reference to the Russian policy on Jewish emigra-ion. Mr. Wixon said, "Eloquent appeals are now being made for the inited States, through its foreign policy, to transform the internal well as the international behavior of other countries, especially et of the Soviet Union. We would not welcome the intervention of other countries in our domestic affairs, and we cannot expect them to be cooperative when we seek to intervene directly in "We cannot gear our foreign policy to transformation of other accieties. In the nuclear age, our first responsibility must be the prevention of a war that could destroy all societies."

. In a major foreign-policy address at Naval Academy graduation ceremonies, Mr. Nixon traced "the outline of America's strategy for peace"—a strategy that will carry him to the Middle East next, week and Russia later this

He told 906 new Navy ensigns and a crowd of about 15,000 filling half a football stadium that America is "the greatest force for peace anywhere on earth" and that the goal of a lasting peace "can only be reached when it is backed by American strength and American resolve."

He spoke of the "threat of a new wave of isolationism" and said it poses "one of the greatest potential dangers facing our country."

'In our era, the American isolation could easily lead to global desolation," the President said. World Role

The speech was a continuation of the White House drive to stress Mr. Nixon's role as a world leader-at a time when he faces impeachment moves at home.

Drike some of his other public appearances or his other public appearances or recent inorthis, this one subjected the President to no hecking. But outside the Naval Academy's football stadium Ronald Reagan in 1966, and Republican Houston Flourney won party nominations in California's a small clamp of demonstrators waved "Impeach Nixon" banners, and signs urging him to release Watergate tape recordings.

the President said, "In our era, American isolationism could easily lead to global destruction." Mr. Nixon said the United States cannot retreat into isolation from world responsibilities because, he said, the alternative to détente is a runaway arms race, a return to constant confrontation and a "shattering setback to our hopes for building a new structure of peace in the world."

Mr. Nixon also talked of his trip to the Middle East, beginning next week.

The journey, he said, "will provide an opportunity to explore with the leaders of the nations I shall visit ways in which we can continue our progress for permanent peace in that area." Mr. Nixon referred to the "hate and distrust" that he said had led to war between the Arabs and Israelis four times in less than four decades, making the Middle East "a world tinderbox" that easily could draw the United States and Soviet Union into military confrontation. After the October war. Mr. Nicon said, it was clear "that a positive American role was in-dispensable to achieving a permanent settlement in the Middle East," and that was why he sent Secretary of State Henry Kis--singer "to offer our good offices in the process of negotiation."

Rabin's Elevation Represents Key Shift in Israel Leadership

By Terence Smith

JERUSALEM, June 5 (NYT) .--At first glance, the new Israeli government headed by Fremler Yitzhak Rabin could be mistaken for a shuffled version of the outgoing government of Mrs. Golda Meir. The policies outlined by Mr. Rabin Monday in his lirst speech as premier sound familiar. And 14 of the 19 ministers are carry-overs from the previous

But the surface similarities are misleading. In the opinion of many Israelis, the new government represents the most important change in leadership since the foundation of the nation. Israel's leadership has finally passed from the generation of long-lived founders, whose attitudes were shaped in Eastern Europe, to the generation that was born and raised in Palestine.

The difference in their backgrounds is significant. Mrs. Meir has said that her first and strongest childhood memory is of s pogrom in Russia, where she was born 76 years ago. Mr. Rabin's early memories are of Jeru-salem, where he was born 52 years ago, and of the harsh realities of growing up in Palestine under the British mandate. It is an experience he shared with Yigal Allon, Shimon Peres, Aharon Yariv and Haim Bar-Lev-who are expected to form the decision - making nucleus of the new government. Arabs, and specifically Palestinians, are not faceless displaced people to Mr. Rabin and the younger men in his cabinet. They are the people they grew up with and have been fighting throughout their lives.

The experience has produced & cynicism about Arabs among some Israelis of the Rahin generation and a fatalism among others. more significantly, it has also produced a kind of native understanding—an intuithe sense of what can and cannot be expected. The new generation grew up in a way that hred this intuitive sense; the generation of the founders never managed to acquire it.

As a result, the idea of nego-tiating with the Arabs, reaching an accommodation and living with them holds none of the uncertainties for a Yltzhak Rabin that it did for a Golda Meir.

To be sure, no Israeli who has fought in three of Israel's four wars with the Arabs, as Mr. Rahin has, is likely to harbor many illusions about the hitterness that separates them. No Israell who has spent most of his adult life in uniform, as Mr. Rabin has, is likely to minimize the importance to Israel of military strength and defensible bordera. No Israeli who has served as a chief of staff and an ambassador abroad, as Mr. Rabin has, is likely to overestimate the value of interna-tional guarantees when applied to the volatile Middle East.

Sabra Practicality

But Mr. Rabin, in the opinion of many Israelis, reflects the nonideological pragmatism that is typical of a Sabra, or native-born Israeli, and has the emotional and intellectual equipment to deal directly with the Arahs, on their own terms if necessary, to reach a modus vivendi. With this generation in charge, they feel, there is at least a chance that Israel can finally become an integral part of the Middle East rather than an outsider living a garrison existence.

The key to the survival of the Rabin regime, which won parliamentary approval Monday hy the thin margin of 61 to 51 votes. with five abstentions, is the party that refused to join his coalition—the National Religious party. The NRP, which represents the Orthodox establishment, stayed out because of a dispute over the validity of non-Orthodox conversions to Judaism. With its 10 seats in parliament, the party could give Mr. Rabin the support he desperately needs.

Nevotiations with the NRP are under way and Mr. Rabin has held open three cabinet posts as

Because of his precarious position in parliament, no immediate or radical change in Israeli policy likely. This is especially true in foreign policy, traditionally the field of Israel's most sensitive political issues,

Mr. Rabin says that he will follow the foreign-policy tenets of the Meir government. But this still leaves him room to maneuver. For instance, on Monday he repeated Israel's opposition to negotiations with the Palestinian guerrilla organizations, but he did not rule out talks with less militant Palestinian groups,

The premier and his ministers are aware that they will soon come under outside pressure to agree to the seating of a separate Palestinian delegation at the Middle East peace conference in Geneva. Rhodesians Feel They Gain In War Against Terrorists

BINDURA Rhodesia, June 5 harassment by land mines and (AP) -Rhodesian security offi-cials are convinced they are gaining in the war against infiltrating terrorists.

"Over the last six to seven weeks, we have been getting the kind of intelligence which makes all the difference," an official said yesterday. "We are now able to dictate the terms," he said. The latest and most intense phase of guerrilla warfare in Rhodesia started about 13 months ago along the northeast frontier with Mozembique and Zambia. There have been no major bat-tles. The insurgents employ land

EEC Is Seen Convinced Time Has Shifted, Is Pro-Marke-

LUXEMBOURG, June 5 POPI). —The British government has convinced its European allies that it wants to stay in the European Economic Community, diplomats said today. -

The government is controlled by the Labor party, which opposed British membership last year and campaigned in the recent general elections on a pledge to renegotiate the terms of Britain's membership.

The diplomats said that there has been a basic shift of opinion within the British cabinet in favor of continoed Common Market membership. But British of-ficials are spreading the word that they still must convince the Labor party rank and file, which has remained hostile to the ninenation community.

Withdrawal Threat

When British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan made his Common Market debut here April 1 he angered other foreign ministers by threatening British withdrawal unless the membership terms were renegotiated. But when Mr. Callaghan returned yesterday for a meeting of Common Market foreign ministers to spell out some details of Britain's renegotiation program, his demands had been pared down the tone was conciliatory and the threat to withdrawalthough etill there—was almost imperceptible. The other foreign ministers were impressed. They agreed that the EEO's Executive Commission should immediately undertake an examination of the community's economic evolution and the financial role of all nine member states.

The purpose of the examination is to determine whether Britain is justifled in demanding a cut in its contribution to the EEC. The examination, which is to he carried on simultaneously with other Common Market business, is expected to take at least six months. The diplomats said that Mr.

Callaghan's new tone reflects a political change in London. In april, they said, the new Labor eabinet was divided evenly between those who wanted Britain to stay in the Common Market and those who wanted to pull out. Mr. Callaghan and Prime Minister Harold Wilson appeared undecided.

Mr. Callaghan's aides have told their Continental counterparts that, since then, Mr. Callaghan and Mr. Wilson had decided that

Schmidt Urges Price Stability Plan for EEC

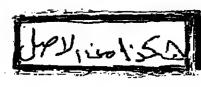

BONN, June 5 (Reuters) .day urged other European Economic Community countries to follow the example of West Germany and France and introduce price stability policies to combat inflation.

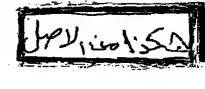

The chancellor said that his talks last weekend in Paris With French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing had given him the firm impression that France intended to give price stability the same priority as West Germany does. Mr. Schmidt wished France success and said this would help promote economic stability among other members of the REC and thus contribute to its continuing Europe and the REC will get on better if the same sort of promises (as France had made on price stability] also came from all the other espitals of Common Market countries. One country alone is not strong enough to secure price stability in Europe." Mr. Schmidt declared. A year ago West Germany in-troduced its own stability program which included tax increases and tight credit curbs on government and local authority spending. Partly as a result of the stability program, West Germany has managed to keep its annual inflation rate at around 7 percent -one of the lowest in the Western world. The year-loyear inflation rates of Britain. France, and Italy are currently running at from 12 to 17 percent. Mr. Schmidt said he believed West Germany's huge foreign trade surpluses—which this year have exceeded all previous records -would automatically decline a: other EEC countries damper down their inflationary imporheginning to taste good again as a result of Dr. Henkin's treatments. When they are over, that's it. I revert back. That's the frightening thing."

The closing of the clinic, lo-cated by a quirk in the National Heart and Lung Institute, is directly attributable to recent cutbacks in the federal government's hudget. The Heart and Lung Institute, faced with added responsibilities, employment ceilings and congressional mandates to spend 15 percent of its budget on lung diseases and 15 percent on blood problems, gave the taste project a low priority.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, a former head of the National Heart and Lung Institute and the current deputy assistant secretary for health in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, acknowledged that Dr. Henkin had made "a very interesting set of clinical observations" on the problem of taste and that his new findings appear "promising."

"It's interesting work, but it's not heart work," said Dr. Cooper. It's the kind of research you would like the luxury of following through on because any number of interesting things might spin off it."

Dr. Henkin estimated the cost of the project at $200,000 a year. He had begun taste research at the heart institute as a result of other studies more related to

He is beginning to treat some of the underlying diseases that have taste problems as a symptom, such as hypothyroidism, for which he prescribes thyroid and does not give any zinc.

Dr. Henkin does not know why the flu or a fractured skull should cause everything to taste rotten. But he thinks his research might have provided the answers soon.

House Unit Hears Dairy Support Tapes

WASHINGTON, June 5 (AP) -Members of the House Judiciary Committee who listened to a tape of President Nixon discussing a milk price-support increase, said today that they heard no mention of campaign contribution pledges from dairymen.

Committee members generally agreed that Mr. Nixon's March 23, 1971, discussion with aides concerned the political ramifications of the price-support question hut that campaign contributions were not discussed.

The committee is examining evidence in closed session to determine whether the price-support increase was granted in exchange for a promise by dairy cooperatives to raise $3 million for the President's re-election campaign,

Rep. Harold Froelico, R-Wis., said of the price-support rise: "It was a political decision , . . It was not in an area of any wrongdoing." The committee also heard re-

The 75,000 cases in Bihar are estimated to account for 60 percent of the world's current reported smallpox. Dr. Henderson id, on the basis of new statistics he had received yesterday.

Five Countries

In April, WHO Director-Gen-Halfdan Mobler predicted "the world will bave seen its last case of smallpox" in 1975. Whereas countries reported cases in 1968, only five have reported cases this year, the lowest total ever recorded. The countries reporting cases are India. Bangladesh. Nepal, Pakistan and Ethiopia. All the Nepalese cases came from neighboring countries, Dr. Henderson said, and the disease in Nepal has not spread.

The organization's smallpox program has been heavily supported by the United States, among other countries. The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta plans to send 26 eptdemiologists to India this year, nine in the next lew days.

Dr. Henderson said in Geneva; "The principal battle of the global war on smallpox is being ought in Bihar, Right now Bihar is the major problem area of the world. We're worried, no doubt

In a report earlier this year, WHO officials chided India for not having acted sooner to contain the epidemic. WHO said:

"Delayed and incomplete reporting and inadequate containment measures permitted iimited outbreaks to develop into largescale epidemics involving most districts in the afflicted states, including many of the major cities and towns."

Now, at least 50 epidemiologists from several countries and other states in India are working in Bihar under WHO spousorship.

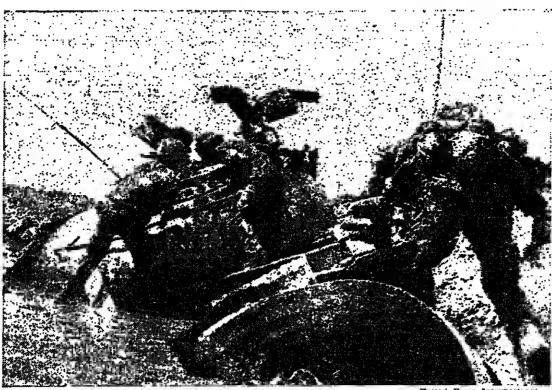

Riots during recent political unrest in Bihar did not interrupt the operations of the 12 epidemiologists then fighting smallpox there, Dr. Henderson said. This spirit, a donation of $3 milhou from Sweden, and the natural decline of smallpox cases at this time of year led Dr. Henderson predict "a marked oecline of smallpox in Bihar in the next

Reds' Assault Vientiane Is Watchful, Calm On Ben Cat Is With Pathet Lao in Coalition

By H.D.S. Greenway

VIENTIANE, Laos WP .-Civil wars still rage in Cambodia and Vietnam, but here in Laos the pro-Communist Pathet Lao soldiers, in their baggy greens and Mao caps, patrol the streets of the capital alongside the American-trained Vientiane polire in their tight-fitting khakis and high-peaked caps.

The fighting that raged up and down this country for 20 years is over. Now Laos has a coalition government including the Communists. The joint police patrols were formed over two months ago here at 1 in the royal capital of Luang Prabang

When the Pathet Lao soldiers first began to arrive in town last year, they were grim and suspicious. But now they are more relaxed and they can be seen chatting amiably with shopkeepers and their customers in Vien-

Red Troops Doused

During the April festivities marking the new year, when Laotians traditionally douse each other with water, observers were curious to see if anyone in Vientiane would dare to throw a bucket of water over a fully armed Pathet Lao soldier. Many did, and some Pathet Lao even responded by emptying their water canteens on the populace

This was an exception, howthey are friendly, the Pathet Lao usually stick themselves. They are not to seen in the bars and brothels of the town. Most of the Pathet Lao are country boys and one was heard to remark recently that Vientiana girls were like spoiled fruit—"pretty on the out-side but rotten inside."

One Pathet Lao compound in town is next to the Lao-Ameri-can School and the Pathet Lao soldiers have ecolded the students for learning English. They said that learning English will only make the atudents more susceptible to American propa-

To many in Vientiane, especially the ideelistic students, the Pathet Lao represent a pura Laotian nationalism uncorrupted by Western ways and money. They are genuinely admired. A few months ago, before the joint patrols were organized, about $80,000 worth of medicine was stolen from a warehouse. The chief suspect turned out to be a Vientiane police colonel named Bounmy Sananikone-a member of one of the country's richest and most powerful families.

"The Pathet Lao would never allow the police to steal medicine from the people," a non-Com-munist government official sald. "Many of us would welcome an end to this sort of thing."

Others would not, however. The Vientiane policeman feels shy about picking up his usual bribes these days with a Pathet Leo looking over his shoulder. One complained recently that it was all very well for the Pathet Lao to disapprove—they didn't have to support a wife and six children on a policeman's salary. The Pathet Lao still live in barracks and they have not yet brought their families down from the hills.

Hope of Corruption

Many persons believe that the corrupting of the Pathet Lao represents the only way of preserving the good life. Every time a Pathet Lao minister orders a new car or an air-conditioner the non-Communists in his ministry will smile and nod know-

There is a certain nervousness in the business community over what government by the new coalition will produce. Also, the free-spending Air America pilots and other American paramilitary types have departed. CIA hangouts like the Purple Porpoise bar alongside the Mekong River are empty these days. Some entrepreneurs are trying to cater to the hippie colony, which is growing steadily, but hipples never spend money the way the swashbucklers did.

U.S. Defends Bid for More Indochina Aid

Concedes It Doubts Red Push on Saigon

WASHINGTON, June 5 (UPI). singer said today that the United States no longer anticipates a major Communist offensive in South Vietnam, but wants a higher level of arms aid to Indochina to continue shoring up U.S.-backed regimes there.

Mr. Schlezinger also acknowledged that U.S. planes continua to fly about 690 supply missions a month to Cambodia, many of them sirdrops to towns and villages surrounded by insurgent troops. He said that there is some rick of U.S. planes being shot down on these missions, but we are taking precautions to keep it as low as possible."

Testifying before the Rouse Foreign Affairs Committee on requests for 1975 arms aid, Mr Schlesinger said the total budget on that account has more than doubled from the current level because of developments in Indo-china and the Mideast.

But Mr. Schlesinger maintained that military aid was actually quite a bargain for the United States because it made possible regional stability in crucial areas of the world without the need for direct intervention by American forces."

He said: "The conflict in Southeast Asia has demonstrated the problems that can result from direct involvement of American forces. Here is where secu-rity assistance has an indispensable role."

Somehow, Poland must build more than seven million apartments. Under high-priority planning, if all goes well, the job can be done by 1991. Huge government investments have been poured into the program, and Swedish contractors have been brought in to help with construction of some hotels as a stopgap source of relief. But the housing plan, which was initiated after Mr. Glerck came to power in December, 1971, is too late to help many broken

The housing shortage was a major factor in a wave of worker riots that broke out in Baltic Sea ports in 1970, resulting in the ouster of Wladysław Gomulka from the post of party secretary. Mr. Gomulka himself had come to power after a party purge in 1956 following riots at Poznan

Since Mr. Gierek took office, the main thrust of Polish development has been moved toward improvement of the standard of living, with par-ticular emphasis on housing. FRUNZE, U.S.S.R., June 5 NYT .- Chingiz Aitmatov is an unusual Communist. Many dissident Soviet intellectuals sing his praises, yet he is also toasted Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Mr. Aitmatov's family background is that of modest party functionaries. Yet, off a country road outside Frunze, and behind guarded, well-lit, well-made high hrick wall, he has built a v.ell-furnished, bourgeois-style country home.

Contradicts Ideas on System's Start

Volume 2 of 'Gulag' Appears, Tells of Pre-Stalin Camps

PARIS, June 5 (Reuters).-Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn says in the second volume of his book "Gulag Archipelago," a volume published here today, that forced-labor camps to exterminate prisoners existed in Russia several years before they received publica-ty under Stalin.

In the 650-page book, Mr. Solzhenitsyn gives in a semidocuof prisoners' lives. It is a counter-part to his fictional treatment of the same subject in his novel "One Day in the Life of Ivan

The first of the three projected Russian-language volumes on camp life up to 1956 was published here last December. Mr. Solzhenilsyn was expelled on Feh. 13 from the Soviet Union and now lives in Zurich.

Mr. Solzhenitsyn writes that camps for extermination through forced labor already existed in 1918. Most Russians believe that the camps came into existence only when Stalin came to power in the mid-1920s.

System Developed In the new volume, Mr. Soighenitsyn describes the development of the camps from places to hold political prisoners after the Russian Revolution into a system for using forced labor to build public WOFKS.

The construction of socialism by the labor of prisoners' is how he described the system.

Mr. Solzhenitsyn says this started in 1929 when an imprisoned businessman suggested the idea to Stalin. Serious application began when 100,000 prisoners were put to work building a canal hetween the Baitic and White Seas. "Stalin is the prisoners" best friend." Mr. Solzhenitsyn writes mockingly. The author gives delails of the difficult conditions of political prisoners, saying that they were criminals, including murderers. who were eligible to get positions of authority over them.

Women Fared Badly . Women prisoners were the worst off, he writes, being simply shared out among the guards. Camp life was like slavery. "The organization of life is the same:

Nixon and the Palestinians

Mixon to the Mideast next week by killing more Israelis? The possibility is there. The shock if not the reality can perhaps be dulled by anticipating it. True, terrorists do not need the occasion of a presidential visit to spur their rage. Often they have struck, during dull periods when no diplomatio activity was stirring, simply to announce their presence or advertise their cause. But they tend to strike, too, when diplomatic activity is stirring, since many of them fear that in the game of nations their own ambitions will be ignored. So it is now that some Palestinians, seeing Mr. Nixon's visit as progress towards a peace of which they are not a full part, may stage a raid either to block that progress altogether or to gain a larger role in it for themselves.

Protective and preemptive actions against Cerrorists are common Israeli practice but we should still respect the guerrillas' recourcefulness, and their vows. After Maalot, For instance, where terrorists murdered 21 Israeli children and four adults, the political chairman of the Palestine Liberation Orgamization announced: "Other fedayeen Iguergilla] operations similar to the Maalot operation will take place inside the occupied territory in the future." The leader of the group which committed the Maalot carnage, a man who had just assured Israelis in an interview that they could "live in peace" with Palestinians, stated in another interriew that he would continue fighting "on an sdeological-political level and on a military ževel." So we are warned.

Previously, events had spared Palestinians The need to choose whether to try to organize a state of their own in part of the former Palestine, the part excluding essentially Israel of 1967; or whether to continue fighting to regain all of Palestine. But with the Geneva peace conference about to begin in earnest, that difficult choice is now before Palestinians. Their leaders—those who live outside the occupied West Bank, anywayare currently debating it in Cairo. They are being pressed to accept the half loaf by the major Arab states, which have their own reasons for a general settlement and do not

Will Palestinians 'welcome' President wish Palestinians to make it any more difficult to achieve. Yassir Arafat, head of the PLO, seems inclined to accept this sensible if painful counsel though he will surely have trouble carrying his extremists. Arafat is himself a "terrorist" in that he offered moral and political support to terror and to the goal of exterminating Israel as a state. But he has also proven himself to be an extremely adept politician in dealing with Arab governments and his fellow Palestinians. No one easier to deal with seems to be in sight.

> Yltzhak Rabin, the new Israeli premier, takes the thoroughly justifiable position that Israel will not countenance the seating at Geneva, for negotiations, of "terrorist organizations whose declared goal is the destruction of the state of Israel." No rational man can argue with that. Mr. Rabin's words leave open the possibility, however, that under certain conditions his government would deal with Palestinians willing to recognize Israel and live peacefully side by side. Mr. Rahin does not say the time is now. Perhaps he does not believe it is soon possible; in any event, no less than Yassir Arafat, he must respect the fears and passions of his constituency. In this small gap. nonetheless, lies what hope there may be for an eventual settlement of the Palestinian

> Under Secretary of State Sisco carefully indicated as much in his observations on the Palestinians Monday. He said they have to choose their own course themselves, but he made plain that the United States would favor "those [Palestinians] that would like to get into the political stream and exercise the diplomatic option." Presumably Secretary of State Kissinger made the same point during his recent month in the Mideast. Whether President Nixon should or can get into this matter on his trip starting Monday is questionable: It is still early in this diplomatic process for a presidential contribution. But it is proper and gratifying that American diplomats should be discreetly indicating their awareness of the need for Palestinians, whose dislocation has been the basic cause of four wars in the Mideast, to be brought into the process of peace.

The judgment to be handed down shortly an a Sudanese court extends far beyond the gate of eight confessed murderers brought to trial—the Palestine fanatics who kidnapped and killed three diplomats, a Belgian and two Americans, in March of last year.

The government of Sudan now has the epportunity to set an example which has been so noticeably absent in other similar cases in recent years, that of meting out proper punishment for blatant criminality. To to now, most European governments con-Fronted with Arab terrorism have put the perpetrators through little more than a charade of judicial process, quietly releasing the terrorists after brief incarcerations in the hope of maintaining unruffled relations with the Arab world.

It should be clear by now to everyone that the terrorist bands are almost as great a threat to established Arab regimes as they are to Israelis or to innocent bystanders far from the Arab-Israeli conflict. Now that the beginning of a settlement process has been joined between Israel and its Arab neighbors, there can be no excuse for exculpating terrorist elements in the benighted belief that they represent some higher cause that places them above the basic laws of human behavior.

U.S. Troops in Europe

Force substantial withdrawal of American troops from Europe and other areas overseas is the wrong battle in the wrong place at the wrong time.

The Senate floor is the wrong place for this decision to be taken because the issue is now under negotiation in Vienna between the NATO and Warsaw Pact powers in an effort to bring about Soviet as well as American troop cutbacks. There are now 460,000 Soviet ground troops on the central front in Europe, compared with 193,000 Americans. Warsaw Pact troops outnumber NATO's ground forces in this area 925,000 to 770,000.

An overall NATO-Warsaw Pact reduction to 700,000 on each side, as proposed by the West-with the bulk of the Western reduction to he taken in American forces-would assure stability as well as the reduction in defense spending desired in both East and West. But unilateral American withdrawals now would clearly he destabilizing. They would lower the nuclear threshold, forcing earlier use of atomic weapons in a conflict. They could lead to the nuclearization or the "Finlandization" of West Europe-or both.

This is the wrong time as well for the Mansfield amendment. West Europe's politscal stability and economic health are shakier today than at any time since the Marsball Plan days more than two decades ago. Governments have fallen in Britain. West Germany, France and Italy in recent months. The new leaders may do better than the old, out that is not yet certain. The Common Market is stalled. Relations with the United States have been hadly

Sen. Mike Mansfield's renewed effort to strained. A major effort by Washington is needed to pull the Atlantic community back together again before further disintegration. Above all, Sen. Mansfield's long struggle, extending over eight years, is the wrong battle for the majority leader and his supporters to be waging at all. The battle to bring back American troops from Europe, an area where American interests are truly vital, was spurred initially by American balance-of-payments deficits and Eorope's surpluses. The oil price increase and other factors have reversed the situation.

The extraordinary notion has been propounded that the presence of American troops abroad brings about American involvement in war. But there were no American troops in Europe before World War I or World War II-or in Korea helore the involvement there. On the contracy, the presence of American troops in Europe since World War II has helped provide an almost unprecedented 29 consecutive years of European peace. Their withdrawal would be a step into the unknown.

Sen. Mansfield's latest argument is that the troops withdrawn from Europe and Asia coold be demobilized, reducing the defense budget by $1 billion a year. But U.S. armed forces already are half-a-million fewer than pre-Vietnam and 1.2 million fewer than those the Soviet Union maintains. There are ways in which defense spending can and should be reduced. But shotgun legislation aimed at American military manpower overseas would be the worst way now to go about

Nixon's Moscow Mission and Nuclear Policy

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-President Mixon's mission to Moscow at the end of this month has raised two new controversies in Washington: First, whether his new approach to the targeting and control of nuclear weapons is sound; and second, whether he should go to Moscow on such an Itant mission in his present weakened political position at

The second question is easier to answer than the first. The nuclear arms race is not going to stop while the Congress and the courts decide whether to impeach and convict the President ann his men. These trials could go on for months or even years, and by the end of them, the arms race could get beyond rational control.

Accordingly, the President is oblized to do whatever he can to reach even limited understandings with the Soviet leaders. He may he under political pressure to reach agreements that would make him look good at bome for a while, but be is not likely to put his own political interest ahead of the nation's securityand his cabinet and the Congress would probably bring him down if be tried.

Dangerous

The question of what the President bopes to negotiate in the way of a nuclear arms agreement with the Soviets is more complex, and in the opinion of Ambassador Gerard Smith, who negotiated for the United States in 1973, more dangerous.

Smith is concerned about what he calls "the change new being developed in U.S. strategic targeting policy": That is, a counterforce policy aimed not at knocking out Soviet urban-industrial targets but at hitting Soviet missile sites in a possible limited nuclear war.

He doubts that nuclear war, once started, can be limited and fears that a change in U.S. targeting policy in the middle of the SALT-2 talks might confuse and hamper progress toward even partial agreements,

"The time has passed," be says in an analysis circulated in the Congress, "when any same leader could consider nuclear war of any sort as anything but a potentially terminal event for his nation. Wars have a dynamism of their own, and nuclear war, no matter how it started is most likely to ered in the mutual destruction of both sides."

Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger takes a different point of view. In "Defense Department Report FY-75," he says:

'Not only must our strategic force structure contain a reserve for threatening urban-industrial targets, the ability to execute a number of options, and the command-control necessary to evaluate attacks and order approprinte responses; it must also exhibit sufficient and dynamic countervailing power so that no potential opponent or combination of opponents can labor under any illusion about the feasibility of gaining diplomatic or military advantage . over the United

Colson's Plea

By Evans and Novak

WASHINGTON-When Charles W. Colson's lawyers two weeks ago suddenly and unexpectedly ago sindicity and unexpecterly entered into secret plea bargain-ing which led to Monday's stun-ning guilty plea, they were open-ing yet another front against President Nixon's desperate fight

Colson, though a senior White House aide under Mr. Nixon, was only a peripheral figure in the Watergate conspiracy and the Elisberg burgiary. But his plea demolishes the badly tattered national security argument used as a defense in the Elisberg case by John Ehrlichman. It, therefore, provides special prosecutor Leon Jaworski with new leverage to begin plea bargaining with Ehrichman.

linked his own fate with Ehrlich-man's so that a guilty plea by Ehrlichman would further undermine the beleaguered President.

But just a guilty plea in itself would not be adequate to grant Ehrlichman leniency. Since the prosecutors regard him as a central figure in the conspiracy, he would have to become a chief government witness—with con-ceivable ill effects for Mr. Nixon.

Months of Pressure

Until some two weeks ago,

Colson seemed a dependable

Watergate burgiars. However, the prosecutors do not expect Colson to become another John Dean, cascading incriminations against everybody from Mr. Nixon on down. Even though Colson helped publicize bimself as the master of Nixonian dirty tricks, Jaworski's investigators had come to believe he was : not a central conspirator. But his very plea does help the prosecutors immediately. While denying prior knowledge of the 1971 burglary of the Beverly Hills, Calif., office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, Colson in his guilty plea confessed seeking confidential and derogatory information... from [Ellsberg's] psychiatric files... for the purposes of publicly disseminating said information." That is viewed by the prosecutors as a major; weapon against Ehrlichman's argument that the break-in was justified on grounds of national !!

security. Colson's plea, therefore, will be used to force serious plea bargaining with Ehrlichman considered a real possibility. Danger to Nixon

Should Ehrichman plead guilty in the Elisberg case, Mr. Nixon's own reasons for failing to report the break-in when he first beard of it would be undercut. But the greater danger to the President would stem from what Ehrlichman would have to say to get off with a one-count plea.

Jaworski would expect a great deal more from him than from Colson. To get rid of a grand total of two conspiracy, one obstruction of justice and perjury indictments, Ehrlichman would have to talk long and hard. At the White House, the unlikely prospect of a broken Ehrlichman stonewall has always been considered the point of maximum peril for the President.

Colson's plea of guitty, therefore, could become the most significant development in the Watergate case since last summer's revelation of the secret tape recording. The frony is that the Chuck Colson who so londly proclaimed the virtues of loyalty above all else in politics could conceivably—even if indirectly— be his chief's undoing.

Your article on Americans studying medicine abroad (IET, May 28; stated that: "Overall, one in three students [in France] is admitted into the second year." This statement indeed agrees with the 1972-73 figures: ie., 30,701 first-year students and 11,355 second-year students. The article then states, "but the fraction in Paris is one quarter," thus invit-ing the inference that the faculties of medicine in the provinces accept a significantly higher percentage of first-year students into the second year than do the Parisian faculties,

I fail to understand how the fraction of "one quarter" was arrived at as the ratio of acceptance of first-year students into the second year in the Parisian medical schools. A breakdown of the overall figures above shows that for 8,430 first-year students in Paris there were 3,527 secondyear students, whereas in the province schools there were but 7,828 second-year students for 22,271 first-year students, My slide rule tells me that this means that the second-year student to first-year student ratio in Paris was roughly 0.41 compared to the provincial second-year to firstyear ratio of 0.35.

Orion Suspends Trade In Eurobond Market

LONDON, June 5 (AP-DJ.—Orion Bank has temporarily suspended making a market in straight and convertible Eurodollar bonds because trading conditions have deteriorated to the point where two way buy and sell transactions are difficult to do. Michael Bonsor, managing director, said today,

Though the bank will still deal in Eurobouds on a negotricing the bank with sain deal in said offers on large numbers of bonds and be prepared to deal on the quotes, at least until trading conditions in the secondary Eurobond market improve, Mr. Bonsor explained.

The bank's decision is a blow to the Eurobond market because Orion was one of the few major dealers left. Several firms have either dropped out of the market entirely or severely limited their trading activities because high interest rates, inflation and currency turmoil had made it very difficult for Eurobond trading houses to avoid losses over the past two

Orion itself reported a loss equivalent to about $29 million on its Eurobond trading operations last year.

While asserting that difficulties in finding enough counterparties was the main reason for Orion suspending its market-making activities. Mr. Bonsor also noted that the Association of International Bond Dealers was unable to agree on a proposal last month that would require financial institutions to channel orders through recognized dealers.

He said that if the U.S. withholding tax on interest and dividend payments to nonresidents were removed, investors would probably tend to buy domestic U.S. bonds rather than Eurobonds since the tax status would then be the same for each. Such a development would make recovery of the Eurobond market uncertain, he said.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, June 5 (UPI).—The Jamaican parlia-ment yesterday approved an eight-fold increase in bauxite royalties to be levied against U.S. and Canadian companies.

The bill provides for a minimum bauxite production level of 14 million tons and a tax and royalty structure that would give the government about $200 million a year from the industry. The increase, announced by Intervention by central banks of the major industrial countries fell to an annual rate of slightly under $30 billion during the period from an annual rate of $35 billion between March, 1973, and February this year, Mr. Coombs said. He attributed the decline to a drop in intervention by Japan.

During the February-April period the dollar declined from its January levels by as much as 17 percent against the mark and some other European currencies, Mr. Coombs said.

He noted that during early May the U.S. currency declined by another 3 percent against major currencies before recovering by 3 to 4 percent in the latter part of last month.

German Banker Sees Danger In Euromarket

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. June 5 (AP-DJ .-- The head of a major West German private bank today expressed "growing concern" over financial dangers in the Eurodollar market stemming from heavy borrowing by countries to finance balance of payments deficits.

Plea on Tax Bill WASHINGTON, June 5 'Reuters :- Mr. Simon said today that individuals with high salaries who currently pay no tax would face average levies of $61,600 annually under administration-backed tax proposals. The assurance came as Mr.

Simon urged the Senate Finance Committee to hold off action on proposed Schate amendments thich would increase taxes on big business and high-income individuals.

The Treasury chief said the admioistration's tax plan-which he called better than various proposals pending before the committee-was expected to be available for consideration this month by the House of Representatives.

Mr. Simon strongly urged the Senate panel to approve two proposals contained in the House package-one a new "minimum taxable income" provision, the other a "limitation on arrificial accounting losses" which he said would limit tax slighters.

The two would replace what he called the present ineffectual minimum tax, which was enacted ın 19₀9.

MASKS OF LONELINESS Alfred Adler in Perspective

By Manes Sperber. Translated from the German by Krishna Winston, Macmillan, 245 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Anthony Storr

OF the triumvirate of psychological pioneers, Alfred Adier is much the least knowe and least appreciated. Freud's ideas have found worldwide recognition; Jung is accorded a lesser but increasing accisim; but Adler has sunk, if not without a trace, at least leaving only ripples on the surface. Now we have in this new book a valuable addition to the literature about him, since it is written by one of his pupils who knew him well but is by no means an uncritical admirer.

Adler should appeal to the preseot generation on several counts. First, we are becoming increasingly conscious of the importance of man's striving for superiority, as Adler called it, for it is highly relevant to much recent theorizing about aggression. Adler was ahead of his time, as Manes Sperber clearly demonstrates, in recognizing that man's striving after power and status is rooted in an almost existential sense of insecurity. As infants we are bound to be insecure, since we are born helpless into a world with which we are quite unfit to cope; and being inevitably dependent upon adults for our survival, we are bound to regard them ambivalently, as both protectors and yet threats to our autonomy. The way differing individuals learn to cope with this situation depends upon many different factors, including place in the family, type of upbringing and so on. But Adler believed, with reason, that the individual's "life style" developed very early, and that the understanding of later neurotic difficulties depended not so much upon the uncoveriog of specific traumas as upon the therapist's understanding how the patient was using and misusing his particular life style to attain his goal of superiority.

Whereas Freud regarded society as essentially inimical to the interests of the individual ("Civilization and Its Discontents"), Adler believed that "social interest" promoted-indeed, was essential to-individual well-being. Sperber points out that although both men were Jewish, Frend was far more a displaced person than Adler, who in childhood had mixed at least as much with Christian as with Jewish children and suffered very little from anti-Semitism. Sperber cannot quite forgive Adler, a lifelong atheist. for having had himself baptized surely true that Freud's intense concentration on the ramifications of love and hate within the family, and his comparative neglect of society, originated in the fact that for unintegrated Jews the family represented the only source of security. In his early years Adler was much influenced by Marx, and many of his followers, including Sperber, were convinced Marxists. Indeed, Adler's first book was entitled "Medical Handbook for the Tailoring Trade," and pointed out the diseases and other evils arising fre poverty. Freud attributed Adler's bi with bim to political beliefs thought prevented Adler from u derstanding psychoanalysis. I

Their hobby, though, has proved to be providedle. They paid only £5,500 ($13,680) at a Tuttersall (near Epsom) sale for Snow Knight. Derby winners have been known to bring in about $2.5 million in syndication fees for stud duty. Until today, Snow Knight had been a very ordinary horse, sort of the Can-nonade of England. Like the Kentucky Derby winner, Snow Knight was an inconsistent performer. Fortunately, though, both raced against very ordinary fields.

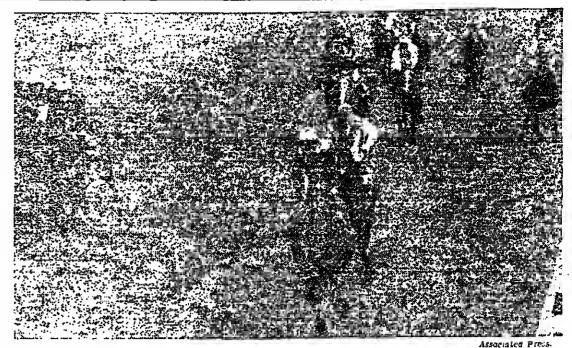

Snow Knight, before the Epsom Derhy. had won but two of seven races, Neither the betting public, which so generously poured a total of £15 million ($36 million) on the race since betting began with bookies late last year, nor the jockeys in today's race had any confidence in Snow Knight.

The winner picked up his clear lead with a little more than half a mile to go, though he had always been second or third before that, and didn't stop until he crossed the finish line.

Then Taylor slowly led his cold into the winner's circle, which was packed with lords and earls, including the Earl of Derby, one of the stewards here. As the crowd gathered to touch the winner, Taylor quickly got out of the saddle. It wouldn't be nice manners to land on a

Henry the Husband

WASHINGTON.—The one question I keep getting asked when I'm on the road is, "What kind of husband will Henry Kissinger make?" It's a hard one to Henry's recent behavior, Mrs. Kissinger is going to discover that it isn't easy to be married to the super-negotiator of the

"Henry, I for- Buchwald got to buy bread for the smoked salmon for our dinner party tonight. Would you go down to the supermarket and get a couple of loaves?"

Henry replies, "Of course, my

He returns in a half hour. "What kind of bread did yoo want, rye or white?"

"It really doesn't matter, Henry, either one will do."

"It's not going to be that easy. The supermarket has more white than it does rye and, therefore, they have put the white bread up in the froot and the rve bread in the back. They're demanding guarantees that I buy two loaves of white for every loaf of rye. I've taken the position we should have the right to buy the rye bread without having to purchase the white bread."

"For heaven's sakes, Henry, the guests are coming in 45 minotes. Will you go back and get the Henry comes back after 15 minutes, "The supermarket has agreed to sell me the rye witbout having to buy the white, but they raised the problem of the size of the loaf. If we get the large loaf, we get three cents off, but that means we'd only need a loaf and a half. But if we get the small loaf, we'd need two and the price would be prohibitive. What do you suggest we do?"

"Henry, I need bread for the dinner. Would you please go back and bring some home?"

Henry went back to the ciore and returned again.

"I think I've worked out a compromise, Nancy. If we get rolls stead of bread we won't have the problem of choosing sizes. The supermarket has indicated it would consider selling us rolls at a special price provided we buy a jar of peanut butter that they're pushing as part of a 4th of July sale. I told them I would bring the offer back to you and lay it on the table."

"Henry, I don't care if it's peanut butter or jelly or cream cheese as loog as you get the bread.

"They didn't raise the question of jelly or cream cheese, but I'll tell them you'd rather have that than peanut butter."

By this time several reporters who are standing outside the Kissinger home surround the secre-tary of state. "Mr. Kissinger," one of the reporters asks, "we understand you're trying to boy bread for your dinner tonight. To you think you'll be able to

"There are still some last-minute details to be worked out." Henry says, "but I'm optimistic that there will be a deel."

But when Henry returns from the supermarket he is glum and tells the reporters, "I would be less than candid if I told you that I brought back bread.

"The supermarket has raised some last-minute conditions on slicing that I'm not sure can be met. But after reporting to my wife I am going back and make one more effort to find a compromise which both sides can

By this time the guests are arriving and Nancy is crying. Everyone asks where Henry is and Nancy doesn't have the nerve to tell them he's still out trying to buy bread for the dinner.

Just as they sit down to dinner Henry rushes in with three boxes under his arm. His face is flushed and be waves the boxes at Nancy.

"Bread?" Nancy asks. "Ry-Crisp," Henry replies, "But at least it's a start."

"By gum," says a reporter peeking through the window, "Henry's done it again."

By Wolf von Eckardt

NEW YORK (WP)—Before the end of this year, 2,100 families will start moving into a new town on Franklin Roosevelt Island, a narrow aliver of land in New York City's East River.

The town's skyline is exciting. It is a sculptural cluster of buildings varying in height from four to 20 stories, rich in the texture of shades and shadows voids and masses. It is almost a mini-Manhattan. Its residents, too, will represent a mini-New York City in the diversity of their incomes, origins and culture.

What is more, this new community. eventually of 21,000 families, will finally keep some of the promises of the old "new town" idea. One might, in the technologists' jargon, call it a "third-generation

The first generation was Sir Ebenezer Howard's "garden cities" near London, early in this century. The idea was that they would be self-sufficient verdant communities, for about 30,000 people, complete with factories and other employment and contained by a greenhelt. A further idea, which their detractors keep forgetting, was that they would take people out of the London slums so that the slums could be rebuilt. We still can't rebuild our shims because there is no place where people who live in them can go to live.

Still Thriving

The English "garden cities," Letchworth and Welwyn, are still thriving and beautiful. After World War II, a second generation of planned communities came along. The British called them new towns: they designed them less as gardens and more as towns, with less emphasis on their self-sufficiency. The notion that you can build a town in which all residents can both live and work never quite worked out. The pull of London and other large, diverse employment centers was just too strong.

But you can have a planned community; that is, a community where schools, shopping, recreation and essential services are built in from the start. The British and other nations are building such towns in large numbers and most of them are admirable places to live for those who choose to live in admirable new places.

Aside from a brief spurt of noble intentions during the New Deal when the federal government sponsored three "greenbelt towns," Americans ignored the new town idea. The powerful real estate and building moustry did not want the gov-

A New Town on a Sliver in N.Y.'s East River

Then, early in the 1960s, two things happened. One was that two developers, Robert Simon and James Rouse, simul-taneously but independently discovered that rather than subdivide large tracts of land, they might make more money in the long run if they developed it into a more or less complete community after the British new town model. The results are Reston, Va., and Columbia, Md., and the idea caught on in a manner.

Some Claim

Reston mow run by Gulf Oil and Columbia have some claim to call themselves new towns. They are comprehensively planned: they include residents of moderate income; and, in their design and social aspirations, they fall somewhere be-tween the first generation British "garden city" and second generation "new town."

But when Reston and Columbia met with public acclaim other developers who do little more than build a community center and swimming pool in the center of an ordinary subdivision, usurped the term "new town" or even "new city."

All of a sudden it was asserted that "private enterprise is moving ahead on the job of building new cities." Humble Oil, Westinghouse, Boise-Cascade and other corporations scrambled for taxsheltered land to give us wonderful new places to live.

They soon said the Hell with it. Building communities, it turns but, is somewhat more complex and demanding than turning out new merchandise.

So all America has now are a few expansion country-club subdivisions with highrise anextments that call themselves new towns and give the idea a bad name.

The other thing that happened early in the 1960s is that unrest in the inner city and the pollution of the countryside inspired some thinking.

It was, and still is, obvious that neither free enterprise alone nor the government alone can achieve a goal of a "decent home in a suitable living environment for every American family." A new administrative instrument was needed with the power to cut red tape, override selfish local zoning codes and restrictive building codes if necessary, and do both planning and building. A bridge between rhetoric and reality was needed.

The engineers of that bridge are primarily two men-former New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and Edward J. Logue. Their bridge is the New York State Urban Development Corp. It combines the clan of free enterprise with social motivation with an sgency with all the powers of gov-

The New York State Urban Development Corp. was approved by the state legislature in April, 1968, in the aftermath of Martin Luther King's assassination. It is building new towns near Buffalo, Syracuse and in New York City's East River. It is building new places to live—homes, apartments, schools, stores—in more than

The most ahining achievement, no doubt will be Roosevelt Island. It is the "third general new town" because it has developed the first two models to a higher, more urban density and makes that density pleasantly livable with new planning ideas and new technology.

There will be no automobiles on Roose velt Island. The bridge from the New York borough of Queens funnels all cars into a "motor gate." a parking garage. The first half of this 2,500 car garage is almost

Most people, however, will commute to the island by cable car from Manhattan. The Swiss-designed "aerial tramway" has two cable cars, which will each carry as many as 125 passengers. In another few years, Roosevelt Island will also have a subway stop.

No Charge

On the island, if you don't want to walk or bicycle, you get around in an electric bus. No charge.

Garbage is noiselessly disposed of via underground pneumatic tubes—the system already in operation at Disney World in

There are several small parks on the island and a large "ecological park" will soon be built. Some notable historic buildings will be restored for community delight. There will be eight miles of bicycle trails and a walking promenade all around the island.

The first residents will already find many of the new town's social services, such as special centers for the elderly, a health center and three day-care centers, one for infants. And they will find good schools. Their principal, Richard Sheely, is already on the job. He knows how many children of different ages there are in the families who are signing their leases. His school will be scattered in small classrooms throughout the town.

There have been "so many mistakes and lies" written about him over the years, said James Hoffs, that he feels impelled to write his autobiography so that hereafter, there won't be any doubt about the facts. Hoffs, who is in a legal
